Dear General Walters:

Thank you for your forthright and most informative presentation of the current strategic situation and its impact on future relations between the great powers. Relating personal anecdotes from your rich and varied experience made your remarks all the more interesting.

I was especially pleased that your schedule permitted you to conduct a student seminar in addition to your lecture. I'm sure your candid responses to the wide range of questions were appreciated by the students. Your comments did much to enhance student understanding and stimulate critical thought.

Yours was exactly the kind of presentation I hope we can continue to provide to our students. Well be inviting you again!

Sincerely,

Dear General Walters:

On behalf of the faculty and students of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, I wish to extend to you a most cordial invitation to speak on "Great Power Relations, Prospects for the Mid-70's." It would be desirable if your presentation would include a discussion on the current strategic situation as well as the probable nature of future conflicts by area and type.

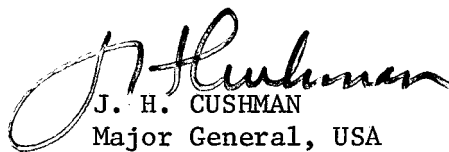

I understand that our preferred date of 27 February 1974 fits into your schedule. Your presentation will be scheduled for about 45 minutes plus a 30 minute question period and would be classified SECRET. The audience will be composed of staff and faculty members and approximately 1,070 U.S. officer students including 14 Air Force, 10 Marine Corps and 4 Navy officers.

We would be delighted if your schedule will also permit you to attend a small informal luncheon and participate in an after lecture conference with selected students and members of the faculty who desire to examine your subject area in more detail.

We sincerely hope that you will be able to accept this invitation.

With best wishes from Fort Leavenworth.

Sincerely,
